

Task One

Answers

1. They are working in an undefined space and he's talking about young people in general have a lot to say and show to older generations. They want to be heard as young citizens.
2. In the past he infers that previous generations (1976) never had the chance to say the things they wanted to without getting banished. They did not have as much freedom as now in South Africa.
3. The country is new and there is a lot of stories to tell. They say that the new generation is going to dictate what the future is going to be like for five or six years as they are going to rule their worlds with new and fresh ideas. In my opinion, nowadays it's really important to let new generations express themselves.
4. It is really important for the young artists to be creative as they going to bring new fresh ideas, new stories to tell and new art pieces. They want to be heard, they want to find new ways and use new technology to express themselves. They think South Africa is starting to grow and change in a way that is going to be global.
5. Hard drugs and high crime issues are the main problems of Vancouver.

6. They mention four free workshops: movie making, photography, art and music. He is hoping that kids can explore different creativity and might use this as their future path.
7. They want to help the pupils to identify a possible career path. If you spend money on programs today then you also invest in your future as you will see the results. This program gives maybe possible future.
8. For text one, the audience is for young South Africans aged 16 and above who are searching for their future. For text two, the audience is older, maybe thirty and above, as if they want to help those kids, they could donate. They are both trying to help younger generations through their life careers.
9. The purpose of text one is to tell the young population that South Africa is changing. South Africa is becoming more global, more artistic and more open towards art.
10. The video has many pictures which support what the narrator has said, for example, they said if you put six people together to spend the day together, you will see the magic is going to happen. She had put so many pictures of the moments so she could see that the magic has happened.
11. These workshops provide emotional and mental care and it is important. The artist said that is really important to express your problems in different ways than anger, and if you don't know how to express your problem, you get emotionally stressed. In my opinion, I truly agree that we need to find ways or a place to express our feelings. If we keep the bad emotions inside, it might cause humans to have stress attacks.

12. The new ways to express themselves in Art such as writing a song, creating a photograph, exchanging the ways they express themselves, by social media we can relate to the same people who have the same opinions as we do. This changes the way of the audience to think as it's going to an audience that is interested in art. More people can be interested in their art. The fashion designer, Tzvi Karp, said the audience will be affected because they will have more audience, a global audience.

13. It is giving them different ways to express themselves, or even future career paths, which brings a lot of young artists together as they have the same feelings. The attitudes are all positive about them as they all believe that art is important and expressing themselves is important.